San Francisco Hospitals

- People often call looking for their loved ones and the hospital will not give information. You may get around this by calling and asking to speak with your loved ones nurse or doctor or saying that he called asking me to visit him. You may either be told that there is no such patient, or they will say "just a minute" and come back saying that they cannot give out any information. This may be a clue that your loved one is there and you can use your rights to insist on leaving a message for the charge nurse. You may then need to follow up with a one page history of your loved one even if he has just been there a week. The hospital does not look at the records.
 - * Make sure the "one page" is easy to read and not too detailed
 - * Include list of medications
 - * If necessary, explain the best way to interact with the missing person
 - * Tell the staff member "if they're there please have them call me at..."

(CHECK UPDATED GUIDELINES FOR HIPAA) *a provider can give some information to a loved one if they believe that it is in the best interest of the client HIPAA compliance document from the DPH

PRC Baker Places

<https://prcsf.org/residential-services/>

4 mental health programs/ houses (+2 substance abuse programs) provide up to 90 days of residential treatment. All residential programs are licensed through the California Department of Health Care Services. Accepts any adult age 18 and older. Most clients have experienced episodes of homelessness and previous hospitalizations for mental health crises, as well as drug and alcohol intoxication.

All individuals referred from community partners must:

- Be a resident of the City and County of San Francisco
- Be marginally-housed or homeless
- Be uninsured or receiving city or state health benefits (not from employment)
- Have a source of income (usually SF-CAPP/General Assistance or SSI/SSDI) to pay program fees – with the exception of Joe Healy Detoxification Program, which is a free service

All individuals referred to PRC Baker Places' mental health programs are required to be authorized for treatment to stay by the SF Department of Public Health Placement Team prior to admission, as part of the referral process to the PRC Baker Places Intake Department. The referral process also requires individuals to have a physical exam, tuberculosis clearance, and a mental health diagnosis provided by a licensed practitioner (MD/NP/PA/LCSW/LMFT/Ph.D./Psy.D.).

CO-OP TRANSITIONAL LIVING

The Assisted Independent Living Program (AILP) was established to meet this need for clients desiring continued assistance to manage and structure their lives. Clients form relationships with other clients, and PRC Baker Places provides a flat or apartment where they can live together while receiving case management services from the staff. Today, there are between 80 to 100 individuals residing in apartments across the city. The Baker Supported Housing Program (BSLP) is a similar temporary subsidy and case management program for people with substance use and HIV/AIDS. Through BSLP, approximately 60 clients live in scattered site housing across the city.

THE ODYSSEY HOUSE PROGRAM

PRC Baker Places created the Odyssey House Program with HUD funding in 1991. This large, fully-restored Victorian provides permanent housing for African American adults who were formerly institutionalized for extensive periods of time, or who lived on the street for many years. The Odyssey House maintains an active program for clients to develop independent living skills. The Odyssey House is licensed as an Adult Residential Facility and has 24-hour staffing. It is the only such program in the city of San Francisco.
